

Annual Editions Aging 13 14

"[The book] is meant as a supplement to augment selected areas or chapters of regular textbooks on dying and death. The articles in this volume can also serve as a basis for class discussion about various issues in dying, death, and bereavement"--To the reader.

Using an interdisciplinary approach, provides current articles selected from the best of the public press, including articles from medicine, nursing, psychology, sociology, social work, and the biological sciences.

These public press articles were chosen because they address the most relevant and current problems in the area of aging. A variety of divergent views on the appropriate solutions to these problems is presented. The well-illustrated articles are written by gerontologists, educators, researchers, and writers. The articles provide an effective and useful perspective on today's important topics in the study of aging. This title is supported by the student website, Dushkin Online (www.dushkin.com/online).

"The Gerontological Prism" promotes disciplinary cooperation in aging research and practice. To some extent, each chapter explores a unified objective, that of generating a disciplinary-blind gerontology. The fundamental assumption throughout this book is that the aging individual and society can be enhanced by an understanding of the correlates of basic social, behavioral, demographic, economic, political, ethical, and biomedical processes involving aging. Each author touches on issues that have both social psychological, and practical policy significance. They aim toward sensitizing the reader to the possibilities of a properly informed interdisciplinary approach to gerontology.

This Annual Editions reader of public press articles contains timely selections from such sources as Harvard Health Letter, Mayo Clinic Health Letter, Healthy Weight Journal; and The New England Journal of Medicine. The topics discussed include eating patterns of people today; the importance of nutrients and fiber; the affect of diet on health; weight management; food safety; and the world's food supply.

What does it mean to grow old in America today? Is 'successful aging' our responsibility? What will happen if we fail to 'grow old gracefully'? Especially for women, the onus on the aging population in the United States is growing rather than diminishing. Gender, race, and sexual orientation have been reinterpreted as socially constructed phenomena, yet aging is still seen through physically constructed lenses. The second edition of Margaret Cruikshank's Learning to Be Old helps put aging in a new light, neither romanticizing nor demonizing it. Featuring new research and analysis, expanded sections on gay/lesbian/bisexual/transgender aging and critical gerontology, and an updated chapter on feminist gerontology, the second edition even more thoroughly than the first looks at the variety of different forces affecting the progress of aging. Cruikshank pays special attention to the fears and taboos, multicultural traditions, and the medicalization and politicization of natural processes that inform our understanding of age. Through it all, we learn a better way to inhabit our age whatever it is.
