NT as an Operating System Microsoft developed Windows NT as an alternative to Unix. The company sees it as a part of its overall Enterprise Computing plan. It scales up from basic 486 systems to high-end RISC systems from companies like Digital, NEC, and PC vendors offering PowerPC systems for NT. The basic operating system consists of a user interface shell (similar in appearance to Windows 3.1 for NT 3.1 to 3.5, and changing to look and feel more like Windows 95 for NT 4.0) designed to run 32-bit programs. This makes it ideal for the multimedia nature of Web browsers, and for the heavy-duty requirements of a Web server. There are a number of elements in the OS that are special to NT. These include the control panels and administrative support tools relating to NT's services and support mechanisms. TCP/IP is included for Internet access through traditional networks. You can also connect from Windows NT Workstation via MS Remote Access to any Internet Access Provider supporting PPP. Basic requirements for Windows NT Workstation are a 486 system with at least 8 MB of RAM, although 16 MB is recommended. The client software needed to connect to a corporate server is included, as is the Remote Access software mentioned earlier.

The Producer Price Index Manual: Theory and Practice provides clear, up-to-date guidance on the concepts, uses, methods, and economic theory of the PPI, including information on classifications, sources, compilation techniques, and analytical uses of the PPI. The Manual supersedes the previous international guidance on PPIs (available in the Manual on Producers' Price Indices for Industrial Goods, published by the United Nations Statistics Division in 1979). The Manual's conceptual framework derives from the System of National Accounts 1993 and recent developments in index number theory. Preparation of the Manual was undertaken by the Intersecretariat Working Group on Price Statistics through a technical expert group chaired by the IMF and involving representatives from the ILO, the OECD, the UN Economic Commission for Europe, the World Bank, national statistical offices, and academic institutions.
