Graduate education in business administration was developed in the United States around the turn of the twentieth century. MBA and similar graduate-level business programs took hold more slowly in other countries, but the number of such programs expanded rapidly from the 1960s onward. In an effort to determine what firms from other countries require from business school graduates, the International Finance Corporation conducted a survey of the quality of business education in these countries. The survey results imply that the strengths and weaknesses of developing and transition country MBAs seem to overlap with those of MBAs from the U.S.: managers in the U.S. and in the developing countries find that the technical and analytical skills of MBAs are well developed while practical training and communication skills are significantly lacking. On the whole, only the African and Middle Eastern firms were significantly dissatisfied with the quality of local MBA graduates. The survey results show that MBAs worldwide are not fully satisfying the needs of firms. Each of the other regions of the world has its own particular weaknesses, and at the same time some common weaknesses (such as work experience and communication skills) stand out. These results show that a "cookie-cutter" approach to training MBAs cannot work. Rather, MBA programs have to be tailored to suit the needs of the local business community while also teaching common business fundamentals. This paper--a product of the Global Business School Network, International Finance Corporation--is part of a larger effort to build the capacity of business schools in developing countries to train local managers.

The motivation for the Eleventh Edition of 'Investment Management' has been provided by the enthusiastic response of the readers and reviewers to the earlier editions which, together with reprints, were sold out within a few months of the Publication. The book has been presented as an introductory level text on the theory and practice of investment. It has been accepted by the students of finance preparing for a paper on investment management, particularly the B.Com (H) VIth Semester (CBCS)/Annual Mode of University of Delhi. The highlight of the Eleventh Edition is the presentation of 'Concept Checks' in the form of 'Test-Yourself' at various places in different chapters. This will give an opportunity to the students to apply the concepts which they have read so far. Additional working notes and explanations have been provided at various places through out the book. Comments and suggestions received from students as well as teachers have been duly incorporated. In an attempt to keep intact the basic structure of the book, the chapter plan has not been changed. Nevertheless, sufficient material has been added in Chapter 6, 'Fundamental and Technical Analysis' with a view to provide more insight into technical analysis. Several numerical illustrations have been added in different Chapters at appropriate places.
